Extract from "Oneness" (May, 2011)

I think I have made my point. Energy fields are analogous to smell. One does not eliminate the smell. You can do chemical treatments, you can do air purification, you can do all sorts of things to cover up as you attempt to destroy the smell. And you might even succeed.

But with the energy fields that keep you in Oneness with the environment, with each other, with the entire of Creation – those energy fields cannot be treated, purified, covered up or destroyed. They exist, they are there. Always.

Reader's Question

I'd say they [energy fields] can be treated, purified, covered up – but not destroyed. My training is rooted in observing and treating – purifying, if you will – energy fields in auras, charkas, buildings, events etc. From my perspective, energy fields alter dramatically when I change their color vibration, for example, translating to a greater sense of emotional or physical wellness. One field can appear virtually buried by another, creating disharmony, or unburied, restoring balance.

I'm curious what is happening from [Yeshua's] perspective and the value, or lack of, in this approach (in conjunction with conscious action in 3-D, of course) to restoring wellness on Earth.

Yeshua's Response

Yes indeed, in the new work for the new age¹ the kind of energy work that this reader is speaking of will be commonplace.

I am speaking of a deeper more substantial energy field that keeps us in Oneness. The energy of a building, the energy of an aura, the energy in chakras are like the crust of Mother Earth. The energy field I am speaking of goes down deep to the core. That is one way to look at it.

Changing the energy field of a building, an event, an aura, a chakra, would be the same as altering one face of a crystalline structure, because the energy fields I am speaking of, simply cannot be changed. They exist. You cannot alter them. They cannot be treated or purified.

They can be cluttered. They can be twisted. But you cannot make them go away, and that is my point. They cannot be covered up, because they exist always.

Energy fields that keep us in Oneness are more analogous to gravity. Now there are gravitational anomalies on the planet Earth. But they are not such that when you enter said gravitational anomaly, you simply float off into the troposphere. The energy fields I'm talking about are like that.

Now, you can defy gravity. You can fly in an airplane, making use of all sorts of laws of physics in aerodynamics. You can leave the earth, as we have proven. But gravity is always there. If you are on Earth, gravity is there. It cannot be treated, purified, covered up or destroyed. It simply exists. It is there. Always.

That is the depth and the magnitude of the energies that keep us in Oneness, keep Creation in Oneness. Within those energy fields, yes, you can do a buff and polish. And you can clear this or alter the form of that. You are, then, improving the Oneness. You are working with the oneness, but you are not changing the energy of Oneness, if that makes any sense.

So cleaning someone's aura or clearing chakras might be the same as taking advantage of the aspects of gravity to get something done for you – rolling something downhill. There is a magnitude, a depth, a spiritual depth to the energy that keeps Creation in Oneness, that underpins deeply any changes made to auras, chakras, events, buildings etc.

The reader asks what difference does this approach or lack of this approach have to do with restoring the wellness of Earth.

I'm not sure what "this approach" is speaking of. The reader's approach to clearing – creating physical wellness, creating harmony – unless this moves forward in actions and relationships, and it manifests in changes at that level that lead to behavioral changes that sustain the new energy system that has been cleared or created, then it is only temporary. It has not resolved the problem.

I offer these examples with all respect, to see if they make a difference.

Blessings,

Yeshua
