

Shared Souls: On Contacting Your Brother-Sister Split

a commentary from The Triad Geoff
and
The Panelist Group

One of our reading community submitted the following question:
Is it okay to contact your split if you know who it is? Is it advisable?

Two of our speakers wished to respond.

The first speaker wishes to be known as "The Triad Geoff."

Two of the triad members are speakers on WeSeekToServe.com –
Lord Maitreya and Anubis. Their bios appear on that site.

The third member of the triad is Ondru. He was, for some time, a member of Earth's Community of Spiritual Masters. When he reached his personal point of decision, he chose to continue his spiritual advancement on Sirius. However, it became evident that assistance was needed here and that he had been perhaps premature on leaving Earth at a time when he could be of use to this planet. He was granted permission to return by those who have a say on such matters.

The second speaker who wished to respond to this question is the Panelist Group. Their bio is also on WeSeekToServe.com.

The Triad Geoff

Krista, your question is simple: Is it okay to contact your split if you know who it is? Is it advisable?

There is, however, no easy answer to this question. There are so many variables being balanced and managed by a soul who has accepted the challenge of communicating with more than one incarnation at the same time that a straightforward answer is simply not possible.

What I would like to do is give you a few of the variables.

1. How certain are you that this split has been identified accurately?
2. What is the current level of spiritual conscious awareness of this split?
3. What is your motivation for making this contact?
4. How will this contact further the Plan and be of service to humanity?

It would be well, in our opinion, to evaluate these points and to meditate upon these points. Every single one of them is extremely important and they all must align and create a comfortable situation for you and for the individual identified as the one who is sharing guidance from the same soul.

Then I will answer: Is it advisable?

That, I would say, would take a separate question directly to your soul. How it is that you communicate with your soul is highly individualized, but I would recommend, at that point, a direct contact with your soul, for your soul is the final advisor on this issue. Those of us who have been contracted by your soul to offer you guidance on the soul mission might also have opinions and your soul might contact us, but your soul is the final advisor on this issue, for there are myriad circumstances which only your soul can understand.

That is my advice.

Panelist Group

Dear Krista,

This is the Panelist Group responsible for guiding ThoughtsFromAMaster.com as well as WeSeekToServe.com. We are a group of all speakers and we combine into a single voice, with a single purpose and a single message, in order to provide certain guidance functions.

One of these functions will be answering your question.

In general, we would advise extreme caution with any contact with an individual who is a brother/sister by virtue of the fact that you are each an aspect of the same soul.

We would endorse the message that has been given you by the triad Geoff and we would add a special emphasis on understanding your motive and evaluating the benefits – Who benefits? In what way? – and evaluating the possible damage. Who might be damaged and in what way?

There may be no benefit at all. There may be no damage at all.

So it is back to motivation. Understand your own motives. Weigh those motives against your anticipated outcome, which is something else that should be very clear in your mind. What is it that you hope to accomplish? And what outcome do you anticipate? Those would be our comments.

We wish you well and we thank you very much for a question that certainly crosses the mind of anyone who has reasonable certainty that they have identified a brother/sister who shares oversight and missions from the same soul.

Thank you.
