

The Relationship Spiral

an essay from

with guest speakers

Derisum (Orion) and Philohstan (Aquila)

This month, I would like to speak to what I call a relationship spiral, and I would focus this spiral on the Community's relationship with humanity in the new civilization and our Off-Earth Allies' relationships with humanity in the new civilization. Now there are, in other dimensions, such as the Unified Angelic Kingdom, those who will have a relationship with humanity in the new civilization, but we shall take that at a later time – and it will certainly be addressed – but not here and not now.

I call this a spiral, an ever-rising spiral. There are eras of close cooperation and mutual respect and friendship and there are eras of distance. Neither humanity nor the Community nor the Allies from off-Earth go away, they are simply not as open and free and easy with the cooperation. The mutual respect and friendship is there, but rather isolated and not a normal part of humanity's everyday life, although, in essence, the friendship from the Allies and from the Community does not waver.

The relationship is more like that between close friends who move apart as one moves to a different country. They keep in contact, but it is not the same as having a next door neighbor. The friendship remains, but the daily cooperation changes. Then, after perhaps decades, the friend who moved to another country returns. The friendship is restored to active, daily cooperation, but at a different level since there has been growth and expansion of consciousness on each side. This is the spiral that has existed since time immemorial.

So what does this mean as we are laying the foundation for the new civilization? What visions are there about the relationships that will exist?

It is here that we come to a minor sticking point. For you see, those of us in the Community and those among our Allies who have been with Earth for many multiple centuries remember the close relationships and the close cooperation that existed. We have memories of mutual respect and much joy and satisfaction in the friendship. We remember this.

Humanity, however, given the normal incarnational life spans and the soul amnesia that begins with each incarnation, humanity has amnesia about these relationships, about the closeness, about the joy, about the mutual respect and satisfaction of a job well done, together. Humanity has amnesia about the time of laughter and the thrill of getting together to plan next steps and the excitement of undertaking a new project together.

All this has been lost to humanity's memory, and I would say that a large part of humanity has lost any memory of us altogether. What has replaced the lack of memory is denial and/or fear.

So one of the challenges facing us as we reemerge among humanity is waking the soul memories of the friendships, of the cooperation, of the mutual acknowledgment and respect.

If you have seen a movie that depicts an amnesia victim who denies a spouse and children, who denies parents and cousins because these are no longer part of this person's memory, then you have an inkling of how we view humanity and how very much we wish to reinstall acknowledgment that we exist, acknowledgment that we are elder brothers and sisters, and acknowledgment that at one time we walked together as siblings.

So we are working, all of us, from the Community and our Allies, we are working through many in the human kingdom who are open to being our voices and many who are open to listening to what we say through these voices, so that a racial memory may be prodded and so that humanity will understand.

The challenge on that aspect is that we are no longer trying solely to activate a memory of what we were, we are also trying to move forward. And this is important, because you see, we are in the middle of a massive rise in frequency for all life associated with Mother Earth, from the mineral kingdom to the magnetosphere surrounding the planet. The frequency is rising. This is an opportunity to build the new civilization and the groundwork for that civilization is being laid as we speaking and you are laying the groundwork for that civilization in your everyday relationships.

We have said this before, it cannot be emphasized enough. I will not go there now. We will return to the subject of what these relationships can be in the new civilization, and what we would like them to be in the new civilization, which is, I would say, an overlapping of what once existed and taking that a step further.

We envision doing the repair work necessary to reestablish ourselves as friends and taking that friendship a step further, doing what is necessary to reestablish ourselves as elder brothers and sisters who care very deeply about the progress of their younger siblings and taking that, too, a step further.

I can speak for the Community and I have two guest speakers who would speak for our Allies. You have heard from each of them before. They join me now, Philohstan from the constellation Aquila and Derisum from the constellation Orion.

I smile. They are debating as to who will go first. But you see, I am the host so I get to choose and I will take my chances at interfering in their fun and invite, please, Derisum to speak first. Welcome, Derisum.

Derisum

Thank you, Master Yeshua. It is a deep pleasure to be speaking to this subject. I have had a submission, a prior submission, where I became quite overwhelmed with the fact that after all these eons of silence, we have been given permission to voice our thoughts to our younger brothers and sisters. This is indeed a privilege and a pleasure.

I would like to explain, speaking for the Orion delegation, and there are many of us, speaking for the Orion delegation as I have been allowed by my colleagues, I would say that we have a heartfelt eagerness to explore the friendship, the cooperation, the advice and guidance we are eager to share, but it is advice and guidance that must be requested. I smile, because that is sometimes the hard part.

Any of you who have younger siblings, or any of you parents as you rear a child understand, but the analogy between younger brothers and sisters works best. You want your younger brothers and sisters, whom you love dearly, not to make the same mistakes you did, you want them to learn from mistakes that you have made, so you share them. Yet, and here I smile, your younger brothers and sisters have a perfect right to explore and make their own mistakes and you will simply be there for them to assist if and when called upon. And that is much as we are. So my first anticipation and my eager hope is that you honestly believe that we are here, that we do have experience that might be useful to you, and that we are waiting for you to call upon us and ask us for our advice.

Now I would say the first step is simply to open your mind and say hello. Acknowledge that we are here, that we are friendly, and that we care.

As this first acknowledgment becomes habit, at some level you become accustomed to the fact that we are here, accustomed to saying hello to us, and accustomed to the fact that we will answer and say hello to you and hope that you hear us. As this becomes part of your life, then we would hope that as the foundation for the new civilization continues to expand and relationships change person-to-person and relationships change within a neighborhood, a country, a nation and between the nations of Earth, that we will be there.

We will be offering advice and we will be offering all appropriate energies at our disposal to assist in the clearing away of those features of the existing civilization that do not serve the whole of humanity. We would have these features cleared, totally cleared, to leave space for the ideas and concepts of a new civilization based upon the fact that not only is humanity One, but that we who are your elder brothers and sisters from off-Earth are also One with you. And we are One with the Community who has been with Earth all of these eons.

We would hope that together, we will work, although the work will be different for each of us. As has been said many times before, the actual building is for humanity to accomplish. The difference is that we are here.

Think of a recital, a musical recital and humanity is onstage. The difference is playing to an empty auditorium versus playing to a full auditorium. The difference is playing to an auditorium filled with your family and supporters versus playing to an auditorium that is neutral, not particularly interested, and yet there. Now, before this recital and after this recital, your family is there supporting you, congratulating you, working with you. All analogies break down and this one will break down, too, but perhaps you get the idea.

So in the new civilization, those I speak for and I anticipate that we will re-create the collaboration and the friendship that once existed, and we will take it a step further and create a new relationship and a new collaboration appropriate to humanity's spiritual moves forward. We all gain in experience as we mature, so while humanity is maturing, so are

we. Yet the friendship remains and the laughter remains and the memories will be there. We will work together and we will speak together, and we will know each other as siblings within Creation. That is the relationship that we envision. And that is the relationship we hope for.

Thank you kindly.

Derisum

Yeshua

Derisum, I thank you. You speak well for our Allies from Orion.

I would now introduce the next speaker. We have with us, once again, Philohstan from the constellation Aquila. Welcome, my friend.

Philohstan

Thank you, Master Yeshua. I would echo my friend Derisum's comments. What I can add and would like to add are my own personal feelings, experiences and anticipation.

As I told you previously, I do spend and have spent much time away from home visiting brothers and sisters, metaphorically speaking, throughout the galaxy. I was ... well frankly, I was warned against coming to Earth and volunteering to come to Earth. Some who know me said that it would be entirely too much of a shock compared to other civilizations I have visited.

I will say that in some ways they were correct, but I think they missed the beauty and the heart of humanity here on Earth.

What I look forward to, personally, is being able to walk freely among you and speak openly with this group and that group about their world view, their philosophies, their hopes. And what I can offer in return in this discussion is examples and stories from other cultures that I have visited. Some of my stories you will find amusing, some you might find interesting, but I would hope that you find all of them educational in one way or another.

I hope that I may be of assistance in opening humanity's mindset and bringing forth the memories of humanity as a cosmic citizen. I hope that I will be able to tell you about your neighbors and your siblings who are strewn throughout this galaxy – who are strewn throughout the cosmos – and tell you of my adventures with them and how I find similarities between them and my own personal culture and every other culture I visit, for there are commonalities and similarities and we are all part of Creation. This I hope to tell you and deliver their messages to you, for one thing I ask whenever I leave from a visit is, "What message do you send to others and the next civilizations that I will visit, the next peoples that I will visit? What message would you have for them?"

Let me tell you that my questions are answered with a great deal of love. These messages are of friendship. These messages are of encouragement. These messages are warnings of care, hopes that the next civilization I visit will not make the same mistakes and stumble in the ways that the one I am just leaving has related to me. So you see, there is, throughout the cosmos, throughout the galaxy, a sharing of experiences, a sharing of lessons learned.

And that is the relationship that I would see between us and humanity in the new civilization, this sharing of experiences – the good ones and the lessons learned the hard way.

It is much the same as word-of-mouth spreads throughout humanity. You have a very unpleasant experience with this particular business. The word spreads. You have a very successful experience with that particular business and word spreads. Email and Youtube – social networking is an excellent way to spread the word. Well, I would have this word spread throughout the galaxy, but you see, in order to spread that word, there has to be someone who is willing to speak of their experience and share their experience with others. And on the receiving end, there has to be someone who is willing to listen to this experience and evaluate whether or not it applies to them and their planet and their lives.

I think that is, for me, a brief statement. I tend to go on, I understand that. But those are my expectations, my hopes for the relationship that we will have with humanity in the new civilization. I very, very much look forward to this, and to the discussions that we may have, and the sharing that may take place between us.

Thank you.

Philohstan

Yeshua

Thank you, Philohstan.

Speaking for the Community, if I may be allowed, we would endorse the statements of both of our guest speakers this month ... and take it a step further, for we have been guiding from behind the scenes for a very long time. It is safe to say that at this point we will be most pleased, most pleased, when the amnesia lifts and humanity remembers or rediscovers that, as one who is wise among my colleagues said, you are now where we once were and we are now where you will be. The ties are that close and we would be most pleased to be acknowledged and welcomed as your elder brothers and sisters who have a very deep and heartfelt interest in the survival and spiritual growth of humanity. I thank you.

My blessings upon you all.
